In response to applicant's filing dated February 10, 2006. The following action is taken:

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 6-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Olmedo (6174170).

The reference shows an optical reading apparatus wherein the disk having a text format figs 1 and 2, the text format includes positional information having a start, end, intermediate characters, space...etc fig 4 and comparing the positional information with the one stored into the memory for displaying the character data as shown in figs 5, 7 and 8C. However the reference does not disclose the "abnormal determination" based on the character positional information. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the positional information to determine a location error (abnormality location). Such would be a logical engineering capability and a standard location determination within the optical disk reading apparatus for the purpose of determining a target address of location.

With respect to the limitation of claim 7 see the test format 3, 4, and 6A.

With respect to the limitation of claim 8. it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to use the positional information cited in the reference to determine a target address or location as cited in the above 103 rejection.

Claim 9 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

None of the cited prior art shows changing a character separation position for reading a double byte character code based on the abnormality detection.

Claims 1-5 are allowed.

None of the cited prior art shows or teaches having a double code byte test character data wherein if only of the two bytes at a present check position coincides with a predetermined special code an error is determined to have occurred.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. 6473376; 6519676; and 6961903.
